

Robo-callers are already violating every regulation established to protect the public from their unwanted interruptions and messages. I get calls daily from robots who want to "reward me" for supposedly having stayed at "their resort."

If permitting ring-free messages is "free speech," then so is allowing advertisers to come on your property and bullhorn their uninvited messages and political comments into your home in a way that disrupts your peaceful enjoyment of your personal freedom and is impossible to stop.

Is there no sanity remaining in this age of alternative facts? I can't speak for everyone but i know how I will react to these messages and the companies or parties that leave them. I will despise and never regard them.
